Grace App Goes Free for World Autism

Awareness Day, April 2, 2011

Everybody deserves the right to say what they want. Listen and you will also get to know what they like and need, and maybe get to know them a bit better.

So, To Celebrate World Autism Awareness Day on 2nd April 2011 You can Download Grace App for Free on iTunes - on the Day!

Our major update with Category Sorting is "in review" and will be available free to anyone who already has GraceApp in the next week or so.

Many kids with autism or speech delay use "pecs" a system of pictures attached to a board to ask for what they need or say how they feel.

These boards are stored in a book which they have to carry around with them.

Even if and when they begin to say a few words, they may be difficult to understand and so they need the pictures as a back-up, as their independent speech develops.

As the mother of a severely autistic little girl with a few words but many pictures, I wanted to keep prompting her to use her own voice - while bringing ALL her pictures everywhere.. so I created the Grace App,

Grace App replicates the picture exchange system by storing a basic picture vocabulary in simple to access folders with a facility for building a semantic sentence.

It can be used on iPhone, iPod Touch and iPad. On the smaller devices you tilt and the cards are enlarged for you to point and read together. On iPad the pictures are big enough to be read easily without enlargement.

You can take and add your own photographs or images, download, save or transfer pictures that you already have. You can encourage the user to do this independently -:

Giving them the power over their communication choices.

It is a simple and portable means of prompting communication and mutual understanding - which leads to trust.

And to celebrate World Autism Awareness Day on 2nd April, we're setting the App to free.

Anyone who uploads Grace App on the day will own it forever and will get all updates free AND It can be shared with up to 30 devices per iTunes account to support Autism Classes and Schools.

Please note: there is a MAJOR update coming with all the features requested by our followers, so once you have Grace App on your iTunes account, watch the App Store for the update symbol - we think you will like it*

It might be a good idea to upload the app now but wait for the update before introducing it to your child or clients - save you teaching it twice. Watch this space for the new manual with updated operating instructions or email me on Graceappforautism@gmail.com for a copy.*

absolute pleasure. Keep an eye on the App store button for the symbol that shows we have our update ready. It will have category sorting, better graphics (I did the originals myself!) and better iPad view.

It will also be a double tap to remove cards - so kids don't erase them while pointing.

Best wait for the improved version to upload before teaching it to a user.
